MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT AND CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD

Dear Friends,

By your side, we have watched the state of Colorado change and grow. Since 1896, it has been our goal to always focus on the present needs of our evolving community. This year was no different, and we continued on the path of growth — expanding our diverse service offerings to reflect what’s best for our clients throughout Denver and the entire state of Colorado.

As the population of Colorado increased, we found a great number of individuals and families in the community looking for more affordable housing options. Hearing this call, we at Volunteers of America Colorado Branch, shifted to respond.

We have developed and are continuing to develop new affordable housing facilities in communities with large populations of seniors, low-income families, and veterans. The Brandon Center, formerly a shelter for homeless women and children, is being reshaped to better fit the needs of the surrounding community, which is predominantly struggling to find long-term and affordable housing. While Brandon’s future redesign is planned to become a low-income housing facility, we have been able to partner with a nonprofit and offer the facility for use as a short-term shelter in the meantime.

As we grew our housing services, we also focused on growing ties with our mission partners — improving the technological systems needed to reach our most vulnerable neighbors. The OneHome system, which we started working with early last year, connects us to homeless shelters across the community, helping our case managers to quickly locate and assist the individuals qualified for our services. Ultimately, this tool helps us to reach and provide services to a greater number of individuals in a more timely and organized manner.

Through our cross-company growth, even our Meals on Wheels Program has diversified to serve a greater population within the community. Partnering with Jewish Colorado, we continue to offer kosher meals for our Jewish clients throughout Denver and Northern Colorado.

As Colorado’s population and demographic landscape continues to change, we will adapt with it, rising to meet the challenges of the future, while staying true to our ultimate mission: helping America’s most vulnerable. We couldn’t do this without your generous donations, volunteer service, and community outreach. It is our hope that as Colorado continues to grow, so will the number of open hands and hearts looking to serve. Thank you for all of your support, compassion, love and prayer through this time of expansion.

Sincerely,

Dianna Kunz, President and CEO
Rick Bruno, Chairman of the Board of Directors

A STAFF PERSPECTIVE:
GROWING PAINS

It is undeniable that we are living in a time of growth. In the past 10 years, Colorado has gained over 800,000 people – with the majority showing up in the last four years alone. The growth won’t stop once Denver is full. Colorado’s State Demography Office predicts Greeley and Fort Collins will more than double in population by 2050, while the Western Slope will grow by two-thirds, making our service centers in Northern Colorado and the Western Slope even more important.

Weld and El Paso counties are growing, too. El Paso County, which houses Colorado’s largest population of veterans, is on track to pass Denver as the state’s most populated, increasing the service need for our nation’s heroes.

Yet, despite record demand, there are only 30,000 new housing units being built a year, with only 3,000 of them considered affordable in Denver. The boom in housing development has brought the rise of prices – and Denver area rents are pushing out our neighbors.

We’ve seen the housing crisis reach every corner of our programs – families with children in our early childhood education programs are struggling to find homes that meet their growing families’ needs; seniors on our Meals on Wheels routes are losing their apartments and homes due to high rents or inflated property taxes; and veterans are struggling with an increasing amount of barriers to find housing and are sleeping on the street or in shelters.

At Volunteers of America, we’ve responded to this with growth of our own. With innovation powering our intentions, we’re reexamining, repurposing and recreating how we grow within the community to provide affordable housing to all.

GRAND OPENING:
THE MEADOWS AT MONTBELLO

Joining Montbello Manor this year is a new sister facility: The Meadows at Montbello.

The new state-of-the-art facility has 86 units, a community room, business center, exercise room, craft room, TV lounge, and a rooftop patio. This new housing is specifically for seniors ages 62 and older within 30/50/60 percent of area median income. The outdoor area includes bocce ball courts, raised garden beds, picnic areas and a perimeter walking path.

GROUNDBREAKING:
THE RESIDENCE AT BOULEVARD ONE

In partnership with the Denver Housing Authority, we’re developing a 72-unit, mixed-income apartment community at Niagara Street and Archer Place on the east side of Denver. The project is located within Boulevard One, which is the final phase of the Lowry Air Force Base redevelopment. The four-story building will contain one-, two- and three-bedroom apartments for families. The property will feature a community room, indoor kids’ center, a rooftop deck, a playground, and an adjacent park. Opening in 2018.

GAME CHANGING: BRANDON COURTYARD

Our beloved Brandon Center for homeless women and children has been reimagined. During its existence, the true need of the community was revealed: affordable housing. Now it’s being redesigned to permanently house families in 104 new apartments. Amenities will include a lounge/kitchen area, training rooms, an indoor kids’ space, a 4th level resident indoor space, a 4th level outdoor deck, and a beautiful courtyard. Breaking ground in 2018.
A DATA-BASED PERSPECTIVE: CLIMBING COSTS

No matter which zip code you look in, rent costs are too high. According to a map provided by the National Low-Income Housing Coalition, our residents would have to make over $34 an hour in order to afford a two-bedroom apartment in downtown Denver, where we have both Sunset Park and Sunset Towers apartment buildings. We purchased our properties over time and, thankfully, we can afford to keep our residents in these central and walkable neighborhoods.

Here’s a breakdown of the minimum hourly wage required to afford a two-bedroom apartment in each of the Denver Metro Area neighborhoods in which we provide housing:

According to the most recent Point-In-Time Survey, there are almost 6,000 individuals living on the streets of Denver that could potentially benefit from a low-income housing option. However, due to lack of a phone or access to internet, chronically homeless individuals potentially eligible for higher level housing interventions are difficult to locate and even more difficult to locate a second or third time.

This past year, Volunteers of America Colorado started working as one of the lead agencies for the Metro Denver continuum of care’s (COC) coordinated entry system, OneHome, which aims to solve this problem.

OneHome connects with case managers from various nonprofit organizations working with the most vulnerable homeless individuals in Metro Denver to help determine and pursue the most appropriate housing intervention. An individual, family or unaccompanied youth at one of the various service centers and nonprofits serving people experiencing homelessness in Denver can meet with a case manager to complete a standardized assessment tool which details their personal information and relevant circumstances. They are then prioritized by the vulnerability score from the assessment tool, as well as factors including

PERSPECTIVES ON GROWTH

Colorado natives and long-time Meals on Wheels volunteers, Kip and Rhonda Harcastle, remember what Denver was like before the enormous influx of growth. “Things have really changed. We see developers coming into these small neighborhoods—scraping away the old homes and putting in giant apartment complexes and these ugly, modern condos. They’re everywhere.”

Kip and Rhonda have faithfully served at Volunteers of America since their early retirement more than 17 years ago, delivering meals to the homebound elderly in Northwest Denver two or three times every week. They are passionate about the volunteer work, the wonderful people they meet, and the friendships and stories they’ve collected over the years.

However, working with seniors that are often low-income and immobile has also exposed them to some of the heartbreaking circumstances this population is facing through the massive growth and subsequent housing crisis in Denver.

Many of the seniors they once visited on a regular basis are no longer on their route. One of these less fortunate seniors is Linda, a sweet, 77-year-old retired businesswoman and fellow Colorado native.

Linda previously lived alone in a quaint, Northwest Denver neighborhood in the same house in which her parents raised her. Her husband and daughter passed away many years ago, but she was able to make ends meet using her retirement savings and social security. She always looked forward to her special Meals on Wheels visits with Kip and Rhonda, as they were the only regular visits she received. “We would always put her at the end of our scheduled route so that we could stay and chat with her, sometimes for hours. Rhonda always brought her little gifts and holiday dinners,” Kip recalls.

Unfortunately, when the property taxes in the area rapidly increased a couple years ago, Linda was put in a tight spot. She soon fell behind on her payments and lost her treasured family home.

A CLIENT PERSPECTIVE: FINDING MY “LITTLE ALAMO”

Volunteers of America’s Handyman Program Coordinator, Wayne Chitwood, knows firsthand what it feels like to purchase a home in Denver. “Appreciation” and “gratitude” are the first words that come to his mind – “I owe everything to Volunteers of America.”

It is the ultimate goal for every person we serve at Volunteers of America to find their own permanent residence. Wayne, who is not only an employee but also a former client, knows how difficult this process can be without the necessary support.

Wayne, a decorated Vietnam veteran, first connected with Volunteers of America while spending time at the Seniors’ Resource Center in Wheat Ridge. When he was homeless, he would visit the center often to play pool, improve his computer skills, and receive a bagged lunch. At the time, he had no idea that this bagged lunch came from Volunteers of America’s own kitchen.

It was through this center that Wayne secured a job as a “senior worker” at Volunteers of America in 2005, splitting a 40-hour week between the Handyman Program and the Family Motel. He immediately felt a passion for non-profit work, and enjoyed helping people in dire circumstances similar to his own.

Shortly after being hired, he was promoted to Program Coordinator of the Handyman Program. Unfortunately, even with his new position, he still could not afford housing in Denver.

That is when Brunetti Lofts came into the picture. Brunetti Lofts, which opened just months after Wayne was hired, is a low-income, “transformational” apartment complex operated by Volunteers of America and intended for homeless families and individuals working towards permanent home ownership.

Coworkers, turned friends, helped him purchase everything he needed to live in his one-bedroom apartment at Brunetti Lofts, where he resided for six years.

During this time, Wayne saved money for a home with the help of financial counseling from a Volunteers of America case manager. When he was ready to buy a house, the organization also matched part of his savings for a down payment, as they do for many residents working towards home ownership.

It was these financial and educational resources which enabled Wayne to purchase his current home, a small stucco house in Globeville which he lovingly refers to as his “little Alamo.”

To this day, Wayne sees people he met while homeless still living on the streets.

“I feel so fortunate that I was able to get help. Someone cared enough about me to give me an opportunity to make it on my own.”

Now, Wayne’s goals for the future are to travel, prepare for retirement and, perhaps, even start his own nonprofit landscaping business for seniors in need. He says working with Volunteers of America has made him realize just how many caring and loving people are out there. “I could not have done it without their help. They made me a success story!”
